THE DAY THE EARTH (Nearly) STOOD STILL IN 2012

(NASA Report)

July 23, 2014: If an asteroid big enough to knock modern civilization back to the 18th century appeared out of deep space and buzzed the Earth-Moon system, the near-miss would be instant worldwide headline news.

Two years ago, Earth experienced a close shave just as perilous, but most newspapers didn't mention it. The "impactor" was an extreme solar storm, the most powerful in as much as 150+ years.

"If it had hit, we would still be picking up the pieces," says Daniel Baker of the University of Colorado.

Baker, along with colleagues from NASA and other universities, published a seminal study of the storm in the December 2013 issue of the journal Space Weather. Their paper, entitled "A major solar eruptive event in July 2012," describes how a powerful coronal mass ejection (CME) tore through Earth orbit on July 23, 2012. Fortunately Earth wasn't there. Instead, the storm cloud hit the STEREO-A spacecraft.

"I have come away from our recent studies more convinced than ever that Earth and its inhabitants were incredibly fortunate that the 2012 eruption happened when it did," says Baker. "If the eruption had occurred only one week earlier, Earth would have been in the line of fire."

Extreme solar storms pose a threat to all forms of high-technology. They begin with an explosion--a "solar flare"—in the magnetic canopy of a sunspot. X-rays and extreme UV radiation reach Earth at light speed, ionizing the upper layers of our atmosphere; side-effects of this "solar EMP" include radio blackouts and GPS navigation errors. Minutes to hours later, the energetic particles arrive. Moving only slightly slower than light itself, electrons and protons accelerated by the blast can electrify satellites and damage their electronics. Then come the CMEs, billion-ton clouds of magnetized plasma that take a day or more to cross the Sun-Earth divide. Analysts believe that a direct hit by an extreme CME such as the one that missed Earth in July 2012 could cause widespread power blackouts, disabling everything that plugs into a wall socket. Most people wouldn't even be able to flush their toilet because urban water supplies largely rely on electric pumps.

Before July 2012, when researchers talked about extreme solar storms their touchstone was the iconic Carrington Event of Sept. 1859, named after English astronomer Richard Carrington who actually saw the instigating flare with his own eyes. In the days that followed his observation, a series of powerful CMEs hit Earth head-on with a potency not felt before or since. Intense geomagnetic storms ignited Northern Lights as far south as Cuba and caused global telegraph lines to spark, setting fire to some telegraph offices and thus disabling the 'Victorian Internet.'

A similar storm today could have a catastrophic effect. According to a study by the National Academy of Sciences, the total economic impact could exceed $2 trillion or 20 times greater than the costs of a Hurricane Katrina. Multi-ton transformers damaged by such a storm might take years to repair. "In my view the July 2012 storm was in all respects at least as strong as the 1859 Carrington event," says Baker. "The only difference is, it missed."

In February 2014, physicist Pete Riley of Predictive Science Inc. published a paper in Space Weather entitled "On the probability of occurrence of extreme space weather events." In it, he analyzed records of solar storms going back 50+ years. By extrapolating the frequency of ordinary storms to the extreme, he calculated the odds that a Carrington-class storm would hit Earth in the next ten years.

The answer: 12%.

"Initially, I was quite surprised that the odds were so high, but the statistics appear to be correct," says Riley. "It is a sobering figure." In his study, Riley looked carefully at a parameter called Dst, short for "disturbance – storm time." This is a number calculated from magnetometer readings around the equator. Essentially, it measures how hard Earth's magnetic field shakes when a CME hits. The more negative Dst becomes, the worse the storm. Ordinary geomagnetic storms, which produce Northern Lights around the Arctic Circle, but otherwise do no harm, register Dst=-50 nT (nanoTesla). The worst geomagnetic storm of the Space Age, which knocked out power across Quebec in March 1989, registered Dst=-600 nT. Modern estimates of Dst for the Carrington Event itself range from -800 nT to a staggering -1750 nT. In their Dec. 2013 paper, Baker et al. estimated Dst for the July 2012 storm. "If that CME had hit Earth, the resulting geomagnetic storm would have registered a Dst of -1200, comparable to the Carrington Event and twice as bad as the March 1989 Quebec blackout."

The reason researchers know so much about the July 2012 storm is because, out of all the spacecraft in the solar system it could have hit, it did hit a solar observatory. STEREO-A is almost ideally equipped to measure the parameters of such an event. "The rich data set obtained by STEREO far exceeded the relatively meagre observations that Carrington was able to make in the 19th century," notes Riley. "Thanks to STEREO-A we know a lot of about the magnetic structure of the CME, the kind of shock waves and energetic particles it produced, and perhaps most importantly of all, the number of CMEs that preceded it. "It turns out that the active region responsible for producing the July 2012 storm didn't launch just one CME into space, but many. Some of those CMEs "plowed the road" for the superstorm.

A paper in the March 2014 edition of Nature Communications by UC Berkeley space physicist Janet G. Luhmann and former postdoc Ying D. Liu describes the process: The July 23rd CME was actually two CMEs separated by only 10 to 15 minutes. This double-CME traveled through a region of space that had been cleared out by yet another CME four days earlier. As a result, the storm clouds were not decelerated as much as usual by their transit through the interplanetary medium. "It's likely that the Carrington event was also associated with multiple eruptions, and this may turn out to be a key requirement for extreme events," notes Riley. "In fact, it seems that extreme events may require an ideal combination of a number of key features to produce the 'perfect solar storm.'" "Pre-conditioning by multiple CMEs appears to be very important," agrees Baker.

A common question about this event is, how did the STEREO-A probe survive? After all, Carrington-class storms are supposed to be mortally dangerous to spacecraft and satellites. Yet STEREO-A not only rode out the storm, but also continued taking high-quality data throughout. "Spacecraft such as the STEREO twins and the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory (a joint ESA/NASA mission) were designed to operate in the environment outside the Earth's magnetosphere, and that includes even quite intense, CME-related shocks," says Joe Gurman, the STEREO project scientist at the Goddard Space Center.

"To my knowledge, nothing serious happened to the spacecraft." The story might have been different, he says, if STEREO-A were orbiting Earth instead of traveling through interplanetary space. "Inside Earth's magnetosphere, strong electric currents can be generated by a CME strike," he explains. "Out in interplanetary space, however, the ambient magnetic field is much weaker and so those dangerous currents are missing." In short, STEREO-A was in a good place to ride out the storm. "Without the kind of coverage afforded by the STEREO mission, we as a society might have been blissfully ignorant of this remarkable solar storm," notes Baker. "How many others of this scale have just happened to miss Earth and our space detection systems? This is a pressing question that needs answers."

If Riley's work holds true, there is a 12% chance we will learn a lot more about extreme solar storms in the next 10 years—when one actually strikes Earth. Says Baker, "we need to be prepared."

The Perseid meteor shower August 2014

The PRA Skycamera positioned in central Derby, has recently been upgraded and has provided us with some excellent shots of meteorites from the annual Perseid meteor shower. The video stills are shown below for your interest.

Information:

In the Northern Hemisphere, the annual August Perseid meteor shower probably ranks as the all-time favourite meteor shower of the year. This major shower takes place during the lazy, hazy days of summer, when many families are on vacation. And what could be more luxurious than taking a siesta in the heat of the day and watching this summertime classic in the relative coolness of night?

No matter where you live worldwide, the 2014 Perseid meteor shower will probably peak on the mornings of August 11, 12 and 13.

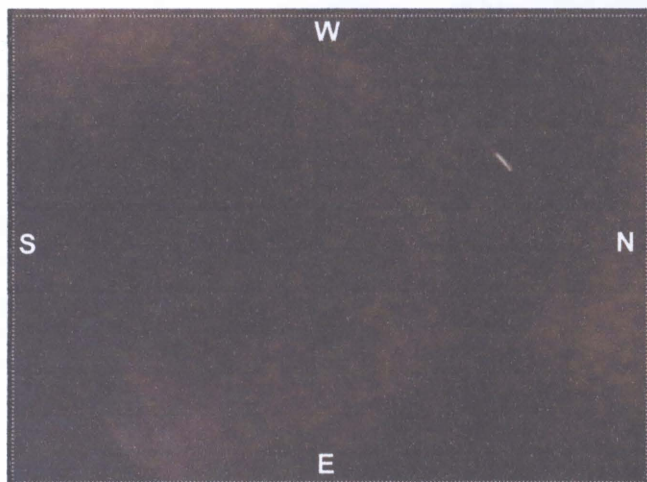

On a dark, moonless night, you can often see 50 or more meteors per hour from northerly latitudes, and from southerly latitudes in the Southern Hemisphere, perhaps about one-third that many meteors.

Unfortunately, in 2014, full moon comes on August 10. And not just any full moon, but the closest supermoon of this year. Thus, on the Perseids' peak mornings, a big and bright waning gibbous moon will obscure all but the brightest meteors.

The Hinckley Times Aug 7th 2014

A UFO has been reported by a number of residents in the borough.

By Siang Young

Two witnesses have come forward separately to say they saw a very bright beam of light descend out of the sky on the eve of Sunday July 27th.

Norman Willis, 61, of Rugby Road, Burbage recalls seeing the peculiar light at around 11pm. He said: "I had just finished watching a film and I went into my back bedroom to have a look at the sky. It was clear except for one white cloud.

"It was fairly dark but the sky and stars were clear to see. All of a sudden a bright green beam came down out of the cloud for about three seconds before disappearing. It was a continuous beam down.

"I thought it might have been a comet but I've not heard anyone mention anything about a comet."

The second sighting took place on the same night but slightly earlier on. A male witness who lives on the Hollycroft estate not far from the Mill Hill Road entrance said: "I was looking out of my bedroom window which faces directly towards the west. I have a perfect view over the whole area from this window.

"At approximately 9.40pm I happened to notice a very bright stationary blue/white light that appeared to be hovering at first but then appeared to slowly descend out of the sky, turning to a beautiful blue/green colour.

"There was not a sound as I opened my window to listen. It was dead quiet.

"The light slowly descended, very slowly, gradually turning more emerald green as it did so until it appeared to 'drop' behind a clump of trees and vanish. I kept looking for about half an hour afterwards but I saw nothing more."

Graham Hill from the Leicestershire UFO Investigation Network (LUFOIN) said: "We have made checks regarding helicopter movements over the area for the date and time in question, i.e. police and air ambulance, but neither craft were in operation at that time.

"We are treating the sightings as strange but we need more information from anyone else who may have seen something at around that time on the date in question."

Solar Storm Warning: Sun Shoots Major X1.6 Flare Outburst at Earth

(From: Before It's News)

Wednesday, September 10, 2014 16.45

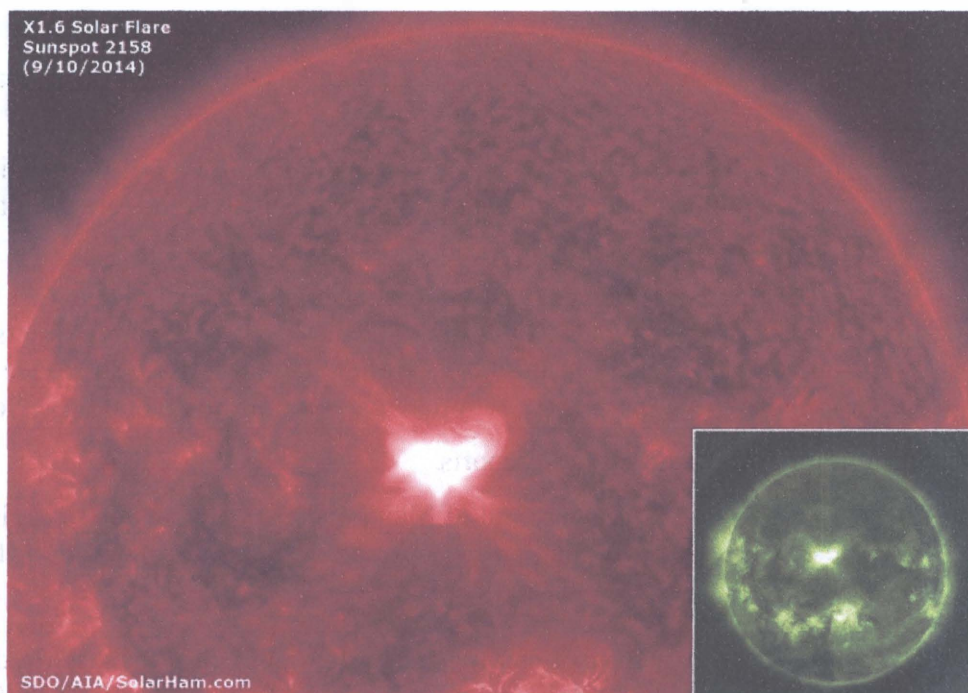

Major Solar Flare

Geoeffective Sunspot 2158 produced a strong solar flare this afternoon measuring X1.6 at 17:45 UTC. The event was associated with a Type II Radio emission with an estimated velocity of 3750 km/s. This is indicative of a strong coronal mass ejection. Updated imagery by SDO shows plasma racing away from the blast site and towards Earth. More updates once coronagraph imagery is available. <http://www.solarham.net/>

X-FLARE: Earth-orbiting satellites have just detected a powerful X1.6-class solar flare (Sept. 10 @ 17:46 UT). The source was active sunspot AR2158, which is directly facing Earth. NASA's Solar Dynamics Observatory recorded the extreme ultraviolet flash. <http://http://spaceweather.com/>
2014-09-11 05:01 UTC A Pair of CMEs

New Update

G2 (Moderate) geomagnetic storms remain in the forecast for September 12th as a result of the coronal mass ejection (CME) associated with the R1 (Minor) solar flare observed on the 9th. The latest WSA-Enlil model run has the CME associated with yesterday's R3 (Strong) solar flare arriving mid to late day on that same day. A G3 (Strong) Geomagnetic Storm Watch has been issued for September 13th due to the combined influence of these two events with G1 (Minor) storming anticipated to continue into September 14th. In addition, the S1 (Minor) solar radiation storm that is in progress as a result of the eruption yesterday is expected to persist for the next few days. Keep in mind that the forecast periods listed are in Universal Time so aurora watchers in the northern U.S. should be looking for possible activity both Thursday and Friday nights.

Unidentified Submersible Objects

USOs - Underwater UFOs: By Billy Booth

What are USOs?

As we search the mysteries of UFOs, an area that is often overlooked is that of UFOs entering and emerging from water. Often tagged "USOs," these objects have the capability of maneuvering in, through, and out of the water into open spaces. The proper term for this phenomena is "Unidentified Submersible Objects."

To really investigate this subject, we must separate UFOs seen flying over or near lakes and oceans with those which have been reported to enter or emerge from water. This is not to say that a UFO reported over water cannot navigate lakes and oceans, but there may be special properties to those which have reportedly entered or exited the lakes and seas of our world.

UFOs and Water There have been many reports of UFOs over water, and a much smaller amount of reports of UFOs navigating our lakes and oceans. The question must be asked: "Why do UFOs enter our waters?"

This question can only be answered with several other questions. Do alien beings have a personal need of water? Do alien craft have a use for water? Do aliens have underground bases in our oceans?

Being in our oceans, of course, gives them the freedom of wide open spaces. They can maneuver, and come and go at will, with little chance of being seen by human eyes.

On rare occasion, however, they do make themselves known, either purposely, or inadvertently, and are seen by crew members of various boats, submarines, airplanes, and ships working in the waters of planet Earth. It would be very interesting to know how many times ocean vessels, submarines, or even planes at sea have seen these unknown flying objects.

We have many reports by individuals who have encountered UFOs over lakes and oceans, and a much larger percentage of these are reported as opposed to sightings by ocean going vessels.

There is no doubt that there have been ship and submarine encounters with UFOs, but coming under the auspices of military and governments, these accounts have been filed away in government top secret files, forever hidden from public access and knowledge.

Fortunately, we do have information on a few of these encounters, usually related at a later time by a crew member who feels that sufficient time has elapsed that they do not worry about threats that were made to them many years ago. Some of these stand out as irrefutable proof of the existence of unknown flying objects, often exhibiting flight properties far beyond what our current technology allows.

Here are some brief descriptions of some of these reports.

South of Malta - 1947 In 1947, about 20 miles south of Malta, fishermen were at work raising and lowering their nets in hope of a big catch. Suddenly they saw an unusual object not too far from their boat.

Frightened by the strange object, the fishermen quickly yanked their nets from the sea, fired up their boat, and put distance between themselves and the unknown craft. Suddenly, a bright light lit up the area around the craft. Small beings could be seen running across the deck of the object. Visible to the fishermen was some type of apparatus around the waist of the beings.

Later after initial reports of the incident were revealed, one of the witnesses claimed that the beings were about the size of a 10-year-old boy. He could see them enter the craft, which soon submerged, never to be seen again.

1952 - Operation Mainbrace Sightings

In 1952, an enigmatic series of UFO sightings and encounters occurred during a NATO operation called "Operation Mainbrace." Including multitudes of personnel, planes, and ships, it was the largest such operation to that date.

On September 13, the first UFO sighting of the operation was made from the Danish destroyer "Willemoes," operating north of Bornholm Island. Several crew members spotted a triangular-shaped UFO moving at high speed.

On September 19, another report of a UFO was made from a British Meteor aircraft which was returning to the airfield at Topcliffe, Yorkshire, England.

The object was seen by several ground personnel, who described a disc-shaped, silver object which was rotating on its axis. It soon sped away.

On September 20, another sighting was made from the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Franklin D. Roosevelt. A silver, spherical object was seen and photographed by crew members. This photo has never been made public.

Among those who were allowed access to the color photographs was Air Force Project Chief, legendary Captain Edward J. Ruppelt, who made the following statement: "[The pictures] turned out to be excellent... judging by the size of the object in each successive photo, one could see that it was moving rapidly." One photograph was posted in Project Blue Book, but it was of poor quality and had no value as evidence. Operation Mainbrace would continue to produce numerous UFO sightings.

Golfo Nuevo - Argentina - 1960

In a report released through the History Channel, in 1960, the Argentinean Navy encountered two unknown submerged objects in the "New Gulf," or Golfo Nuevo. This event occurred about 650 miles south of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

It was initially thought that the objects were submarines, but this theory was soon dismissed, as the objects appeared to break into smaller pieces, and fly out of the ocean. According to reports by Philip Mantle, these pieces disappeared as they left the water.

Of course, skeptics believe that all that was seen were submarines firing torpedoes, but it was revealed that in 1960, the firing of six or more torpedoes at one time was not possible.

Seattle, Washington - 1966

In 1966, the USS Tiru SS-416 left Pearl Harbor bound for Seattle, Washington, during the Rose Festival. The submarine was set at a pier near downtown Seattle, and toured by thousands of curious individuals.

Unknown at this time was that the sub's trip to Seattle had been far from routine. While cruising on the water's surface one late afternoon, the port lookout reported a strange object at a range of 2 miles bearing 315 degrees relative. The port lookout referred his contact to the starboard and OOD (Object Oriented Design) lookouts. The three lookouts, using binoculars, were shocked to see a metallic craft, larger than a football field, drop from the clouds into the ocean. It was reported to tumble end over end, hit the water, and disappear among the water geysers and ocean.

When starboard and OOD lookouts confirmed what they had seen, the port lookout related that initially he had seen the object go from the water up into the clouds.

All three lookouts reported seeing the object leave the ocean and join the clouds.

During the same time period, radar reported a contact at the same range and bearing. Sonar was picking up strange echoes. The Captain was called to the bridge and along with the chief Quartermaster, arrived within minutes. Almost immediately, the unknown object fell from the clouds into the ocean once again. Soon, however, the TIRU moved out of visual contact with the object. The Captain issued an order to all present: Never discuss what they had seen under any circumstances.

The Captain went below and sent a radio message. The witnesses had seen a metallic craft, decked out with machined parts. There appeared to be windows around its circumference. No noise was heard. The object was shaped like a saucer with a bowl inverted in the saucer and it was huge.

1966 - USS TIRU Encounters UFO

In 1966, the USS TIRU SS-416 submarine was moored to a civilian pier in Seattle, Washington. The sub was part of the Rose Festival, and was harbored for public touring.

The TIRU's UFO encounter occurred during its trip from Pearl Harbor in route to Seattle, when the port lookout noticed a strange object about 2 miles away. Several crew members were alerted, and confirmed the sighting of a metallic craft, larger than a football field.

The object flew into the sea, soon emerged, and went into the clouds. There was also radar confirmation of the sighting. All in all, at least five crew members saw the unknown flying object, and photographs were taken, but have not been made public.

Shag Harbor, Nova Scotia - 1967

One of the most well known UFO cases is that of the Shag Harbor Crash of 1967, although it is most difficult to determine if the UFO navigated into the water purposely, or crashed into the waters.

However, if later eyewitness testimony can be believed, a second craft entered the waters to aid the first craft. It has been reported that the US Navy monitored the objects for quiet some time. This would certainly indicate to me that the first object, possibly in trouble, had used the waters to avoid detection, awaiting aid from the second ship.

1968 - Panamax Bulk Carrier GRICHUNA

The GRICHUNA was loaded with coal when it left South Carolina in route to Japan in 1968. Our witness, a second officer, was on night watch on the 0000 - 0400 hours shift as the vessel was off the coast of Florida. Seas were calm, and the GRICHUNA was making about 15 knots with good visibility. The officer was on the ship's port side, watching the lights of Palm Beach. Suddenly, he was distracted by lights under the water.

The strange lights were about 10-15 meters deep, and 30-40 meters from the ship. The object was similar to an airplane, except it had no wings or tail. The officer could plainly see windows on the craft. This ruled out the possibility of it being a naval submarine. Although there were some tourist subs with windows, they would not be operating at night. The officer also stated that the object was moving at a speed much greater than any of our subs could manage at that time. (End of report extract).

OVNI Ed: The late Gordon Creighton (Editor of 'Flying Saucer Review') once referred to a woman witness that he had interviewed, who had been travelling on a small ship returning to the mainland from the Isles of Scilly. The woman had been standing on the deck of the ship with numerous other passengers, when a disc shaped object erupted from the sea and hurtled skywards. The startled passenger looked around at her companions to discuss the frightening event...but everyone on deck just carried on chatting as normal. Seemingly, no one else had experienced 'seeing' the craft rise from the sea ???

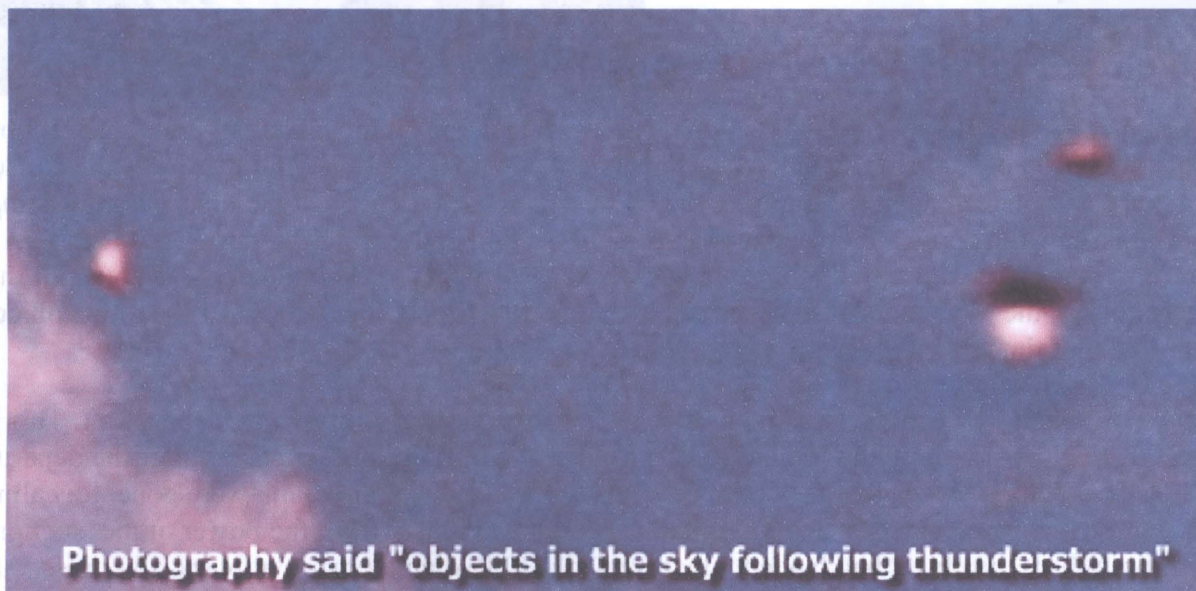

Multiple UFOs Over Jerseyville, Illinois, September 9, 2014

From: 'Before It's News' Wednesday, September 10, 2014

(N.Morgan) There was an incredible UFO sighting in Jerseyville, Illinois September 9th, 2014. As you can see in the video and the photos, there was more than one and they are very odd looking and seem to stay in one place.

Many have been pondering the meaning of all of these sightings that have been taking place, as of late. Is this some sort of galactic feeling that something big is about to occur?

You can see there's a storm on the horizon and one must wonder if that was the attraction for this visit. Was it the storm that brought them in?

Photography said "objects in the sky following thunderstorm"

OVNI Ed: We have no further information on these photographs, but they appear to be genuine and either a natural phenomenon or could the storm really have attracted a number of UFO's?

UFO Empties Water Tank - Rosedale, Australia – 1980

A classic case of UFOs use of water - Large Water Tank By Billy Booth

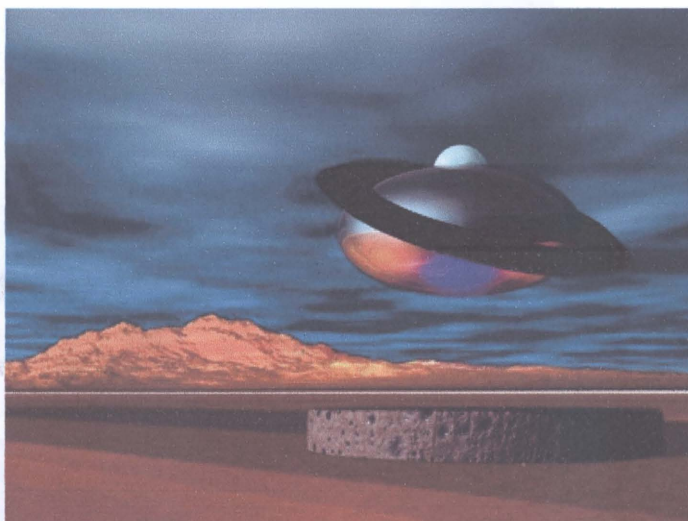

In 1980, one of Ufology's best UFO/Water cases took place. Allegedly, a 10,000 gallon water tank was emptied at the White Acres farm in Rosedale, Victoria on September 30.

The Rosedale Event This case has been highly touted by Australian researcher Paul Norman, who claimed it a 'very impressive UFO landing and physical trace event.' The case at Rosedale was not isolated; the entire Gippsland region reported that water was taken from a number of lakes, and other water storage facilities. These events occurred from '85-'90. Obviously something very unusual was happening. Though these cases were important, the Rosedale case was the most heralded of them all.

The case began when the caretaker of "White-Acres" property, a 54-year-old man, heard and witnessed various unsettling actions from the livestock one night. He had trouble sleeping that night and was up about 1:00 AM. Then he witnessed a domed UFO with a white top. The object was only about 8 ft. in altitude. He could see orange and blue lights could be seen on the surface of the object. The caretaker estimated the objects size at about 28 ft. in diameter and 15 ft. tall. Oddly, the object did not light up the ground as it moved along, yet the object was self-illuminating.

The UFO appeared to hover over a 10,000 gallon water tank before it landed some 50 ft. from the tank. The caretaker, riding a motorbike, approached the object and got to within ten yards or so. He heard a type of whistling noise before it changed to a an 'awful scream.'

A black tube (evidently a type of water hose) now appeared around the base of the UFO. A loud bang was heard as the object lifted itself up and moved away from the landing spot. A blast of hot air accompanied the lifting of the UFO, almost knocking the bike-riding gentleman to the ground. After it repositioned itself, it went silent.

Debris fell away from the UFO, and it moved out of sight to the east. The eyewitness described the object in greater detail: There were two sections, one 'a white dome on top and a larger orange section underneath.' He also noted circular windows or lights on the bottom section. And there was the unusual tube or water hose connected to the bottom of the UFO. The witness described the object as consisting of two sections, 'a white dome on top and a larger orange section underneath' and around the bottom section he also stated there appeared to be 'circular windows or lights' - what makes the account all the more interesting is the fact that he also described a kind of 'tube' appearing from the base of the object which isn't the first time this has been reported.

The caretaker became sick with nausea and headaches for several weeks following the incident. This is, of course, due to close proximity to radiation. He also discovered some strange clues after the departure of the UFO. The major one was that the entire contents of the 10,000 gallon tank were gone, revealing a muddy bottom which was coned-up about 2 ft. tall. This was obviously from the power of the suction from the tube. Where the object had landed now revealed a 30 ft. diameter ring of black, flat grass. Also, yellow flowers previously in the circle was gone.

Investigations were conducted by a number of people including Bill Chalker, Gary Little and Keith Basterfield. Three months after the event, the landing spot could be made out, though it had naturally faded. The area had been mowed in the interim, but only a small area of the circle had begun to regrow vegetation.

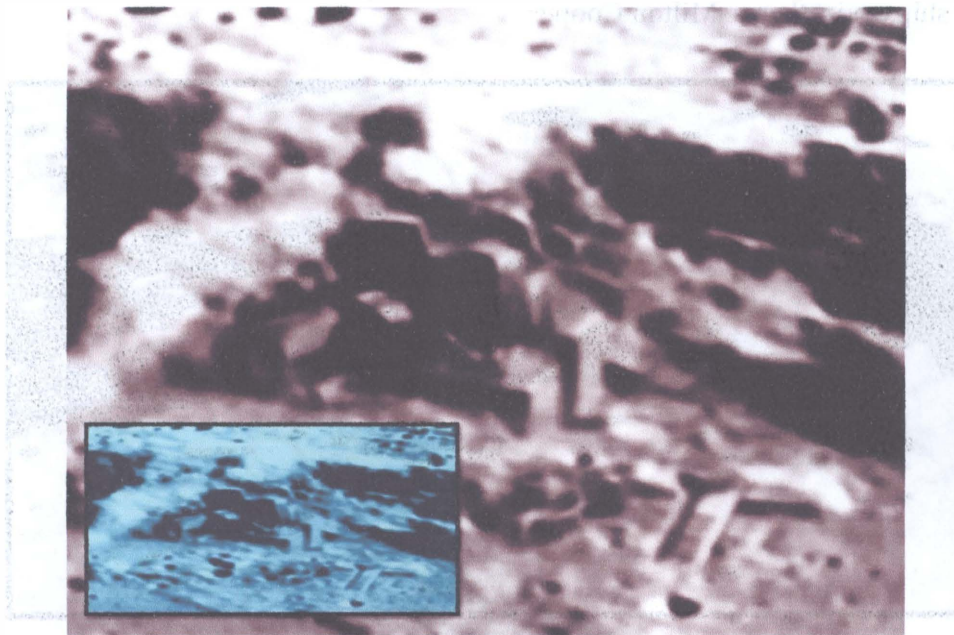

China Releases Moon Footage Of Alien Bases

Wednesday, August 13, 2014 (Before It's News)

Dr. Micheal Salla has indicated that there is a Military Industrial Extraterrestrial Complex or MIEC, and that Earth is being assimilated by an alien agenda which also operates on Earth's Moon.

The photo below is similar to many that I myself have seen. It appears that the Chinese who took the photo, have confirmed that aliens exist. The Chinese have probably been in contact with these aliens already.

That would explain why so many radio telescopes are searching for signals from aliens, and more being built as we speak, yet no reported signals from aliens were reported to the public.

The report stipulates:

"I was sent some pictures by a source who claims China will be releasing Hi Res images taken by the Chang'e-2 moon orbiter, which clearly show buildings and structures on the moons surface.

He also claims NASA has deliberately bombed important areas of the Moon in an effort to destroy ancient artefacts and facility's.

Pictures yet to be released clearly show nuclear impact craters and building debris caused by explosions in an effort by NASA to destroy the truth.

China is moving toward full disclosure of the Extraterrestrial reality, if these images and future ones are verified genuine then NASA should be investigated for fraud and treason. China will be releasing all the data and images from the Chang'e-2 in the coming weeks and months, lets hope this is the beginning of a new era."

Have you ever wondered why we haven't returned to the Moon again?

The truth is that NASA is hiding a very dark secret from us!

Is there an "Alien Base" on the Moon? More and more people are coming forward with stories that might prove this is true. Rumors say that there is an Alien Moon Base on the far side of the moon, the side we never see from Earth.

Did you ever wonder why the Moon landings stopped and why we have not tried to build a Moon Base? It does seem like a better and easier idea than a floating space station with no access to any raw materials or supplies?

According to the NASA Astronaut Neil Armstrong the aliens have a base on the Moon and told us in no uncertain terms to get off and stay off the Moon!

Sound far fetched? Milton Cooper, a Naval Intelligence Officer tells us that not only does the Alien Moon Base exist but the U.S. Naval Intelligence Community refers to the Alien Moon Base as "Luna," that there is a huge mining operation going on there, and that is where the aliens keep their huge mother ships while the trips to Earth are made in smaller "flying saucers".

LUNA: The Alien base on the far side of the Moon. It was seen and filmed by the Apollo astronauts. A base, a mining operation using very large machines, and the very large alien craft described in sighting reports as mother ships exist there. -Milton Cooper

OVNI Ed: What are we to make of these reports that there are alien bases on the Moon?

There have been reports of strange lights on the surface of the Moon for many years. In fact the late Dr Allen Hynek had an interest in this subject. (Extracts from the Simon Lewis book 'The Two Faced Moon' follow).

Long before any Moon landings of any kind, observations of unusual activity had been recorded on the Moon. From this came the term 'Chronological reported lunar events'. The Moon it seemed was not the dead body we were all made to believe.

The official report which was documented by Patrick Moore and Barbara Middlehurst in 1968 was later updated in 1971. It is an amazing insight into Moon activities over the centuries.

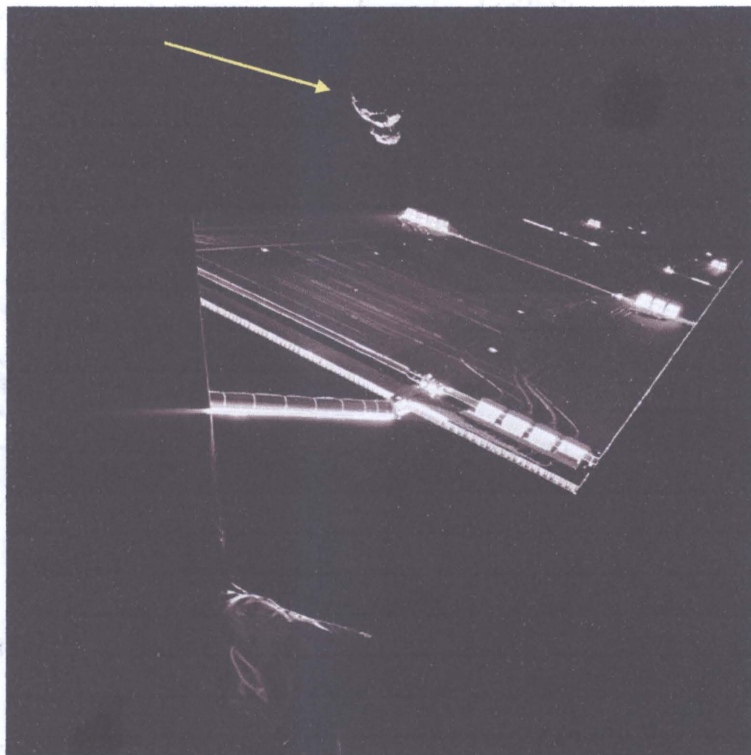

As early as 1671 on the 12th November, D Casio observed around the crater P Tatus, small whitish clouds and in more recent years the NASA Lunar Orbiter photographed what seemed to be cone shaped clouds as well as Cirrocumulus Clouds in an area of the crater Vitello, Mare Imbrium.

One of the main talking points is red-spots, red streaks and bright areas etc. These have been observed around craters such as Plato and Aristachus. These observations go back hundreds of years and these activities leave us with many questions.

During the Apollo 11 mission, the astronauts reported several strange fluorescent events and this resulted in a number of exchanges between astronauts Armstrong, Adrin, Collins and Houston (McCondles), which has all been well documented. (end of extract)

We are left with numerous questions as to what is going on around the Moon and it will be interesting to see if the news media will take any interest in the Chinese Moon photographs currently being released!

Rosetta Spacecraft Takes a 'Selfie' with Comet 67P/Churyumov-Gerasimenko

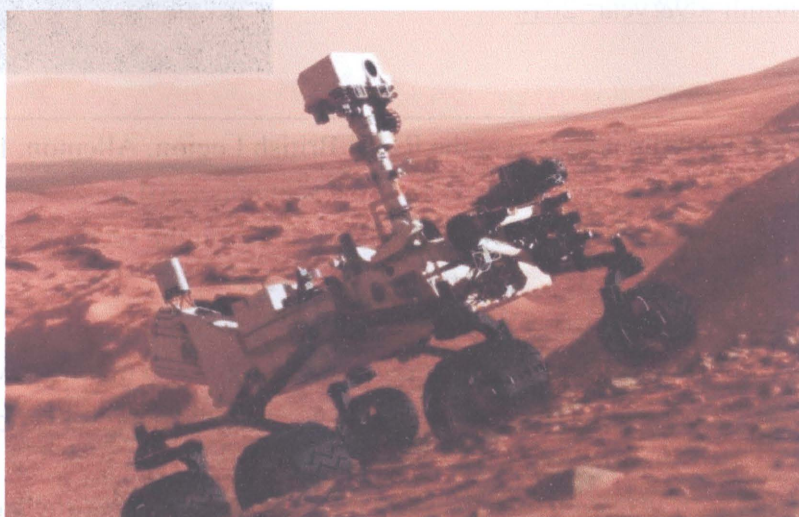

An other worldly take on an earthly trend , as Rosetta poses with its comet, 67P/Churyumov-Gerasimenko , imaged Sunday September 7th , 2014.

Here is a Rosetta 'selfie' with comet 67P/Churyumov-Gerasimenko in the background (arrowed). It was taken by the CIVA camera - short for Camera Infrared and Visible Analyser - on board the Philae Lander.

This is the same camera that will be acquiring images from the surface of the comet itself, when the Philae Lander sets down on the comet in November. Comet 67P/Churyumov - Gerasimenko was 50 kilometres/ 31 miles away at the time of this image. Two frames were taken and merged, due to the high contrast.

Rosetta isn't the first otherworldly object to get in on the Earthly trend of 'selfies', NASA's Mars Curiosity rover, caught one too, earlier this year.

The Mars Curiosity Rover has now completed a year wandering across the planet of Mars.

Clas Svahn of the UFO archive group, AFU (Sweden) will be paying us a visit on Saturday morning 20th September to collect a variety of UFO books and a Peruvian artefact from the Nazca Desert!

The replica artefact is shown on the right, the original is in the aeronautical museum in Lima, Peru. The replica ceramic artefact was obtained during a visit to Dr. Javier Cabrera Darquea and has been illustrated in his book 'El Mensaje De Las Piedras Grabadas De Ica' (pages 337—350).

It describes that the object could well represent a 'UFO' that visited the 'Nazca Desert' and may have had some connection with the figures in the desert.

Figure '2' The white dots are believed to represent the stars and the black zig-zag line shows that the UFO 'flew' through the stars in the sky.

Figure '3' The white squares of light, are believed to show the lights (possibly rotating) around the bottom of the craft.

This replica artefact is being passed to the Swedish AFU archives to display and for safe keeping.

Our thanks go to Clas Svahn and his group for their kind co-operation in keeping our records (copies to be supplied to us at a later date).
